Our Story

Steeped in centuries of history, The Weston Manor stands as a living testament to English heritage, elegance, and endurance. Though the house dates from the 14th century, its life began far earlier — in the 11th century, when Wigod of Wallingford, cupbearer to Edward the Confessor, held Weston as his estate.

Through the centuries, the Manor passed through noble hands — from Robert D'Oyley, who settled it upon his wife Edith Forne, once the mistress of Henry I, to their grandson Henry D'Oyley, who granted it as dowry to his daughter Maud, bride of Maurice de Gaunt.

Together, they became entwined in the rebellion against King John (1215–1217), their story as bold as the stone walls that still stand today.

In 1226, Maurice de Gaunt gifted the Manor to the Monks of Oseney Abbey, transforming it into one of their most prized estates. Surrounding farms flourished under its care, while the Abbots of Oseney held their courts in what we now call the Barons Hall — the beating heart of the Manor, a place of history, hospitality, and gathering.

Today, those same walls echo with the laughter of guests, the clink of glass, and the warmth of friendship — where heritage meets hedonism, and every sip tells a story.
